WEDNESDAY. NOVEMBER 16 Industrial School-Children's Aid So

ciety. We suggested in the Panny Panss on the 4th inst. the necessity of making a move to establish in this city an Industrial School. The first move has now been made. A number of our benevolent citizens availed themselves of the presence in our city of Mr. R. WATERTON, Superintendent of the Cleveland Industrial School, to talk the matter over and inquire what should be done. The meeting, at which Mr. A M. TAYLOR presided, took place on Monday afternoon, in the rooms of Y. M. C. Union. We observed among those present Revs. H. M. STORES, KINGSTON GOD-DARD, HENRY PAY, of Lane Seminary, Samuel D. CLAYTON, of Cincinnati Bethel; also, CHARLES RESERVELIN, H. THANK MILLER, A. E. CHAMBER-LIN, JOHN W. SHIPLBY, B. FRANKLAND, S. P. BROADWELL, S. P. BISHOP, Dr. DAVID JUDKINS, H. SHIPLEY, GEO. F. DAVIS and others.

Mr. WATERTOWN answered questions, and imparted information as to the working of the Cleveland schools. Children too poorly clad for ordinary schools and too degraded to obey their rules, young beggars, the destitute and abandoned, are sought out and induced to visit this Industrial School, which has been furnished by the City Council. When first admitted, girls are put to sewing-the boys aiding in manufacture of brushes. Each are given daily a cent ticket, some as high as five cents, in proportion to their good behavior or skill in work. Each Friday these are taken up and exchanged, and every few weeks the full amount earned is applied to procuring them suitable clothing. They have thus a spur-a genuine stimulus to exertion: they feel as if their clothes are earned, not given. Six hours are alternately given to instruction in letters and in mechanical work. They are furnished with a dinner of soup, of bread and of cheese. Places are secured for them when they are deemed deserving of them, and but few prove faithless.

The City Council furnishes schoolhouse, teachers, fires and furniture; the citizens denate liberally to support the Superintendent, and to meet other expenses.

The second year's report has been printed, showing 250 registered, but the highest ever in attendance at one time was 225. Fortyseven of the number having learned habits of labor and subjection, have been secured places in families, as servants, or by adoption in good families. A Children's Aid Society, of Indies and gentlemen, to raise funds and support the Industrial School, is a part of the plan.

The preliminary meeting of Monday resulted in the appointment of a committee, viz: A. M. TAYLOR, CHARLES REEMELIN, WILLIAM LECTHSTROM, Rev. SAML. D. CLAYTON, HERET THANE MILLER and S. P. BROADWELL, who are to report next Monday afternoon at three o'clock. If you wish to enjoy your Thanksgiving dinner, take part in this new movement looking toward making the destitute comfortable and mischievous children useful.

The Point of Order.

Thirty out of the thirty-four members attended in Council Monday night, and after three hours business adjourned, making the resolution to permit railroad connection by Front-street, between the depots on that street, the special order for to-night. A question had been raised, does the nondelivery of a notice to one member of a called meeting make the opinion that it did not. In this unsatisfactory condition Council adjourned. The Clerk has made up his minutes on a separate sheet, and has not placed the proceedings on the recordbook. Now, if Council agrees that Monday night's meeting is illegal, no record thereof can be allowed on the minutes-no dollar a night can be allowed members attending, and the special order is not in order.

"One Way."

Rev. John G. Faz, of Kentucky, an antislavery speaker, in a recent address to New Yorkers, at Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, said of BROWS: "He did not think Brows's great courage had been properly directed; and thought the more effectual way would be to go to the masters and convince them by means of the gospel that slavery is a sin."

HERRY WARD BRECHER said of the slave owners: "There was one way to upset them. The North had no right to go to the slaveholders and take them by the throat and call them names; but they had a right to throw the gospel at them, and touch their bearts In that Edward Bates, of Missouri.

Another Missouri Compromise, some think, will take place, by making Mr. Barrs, of St. Louis, a candidate for the Presidency. If Governor Wiss should be a candidate on the other side, the contest would be one of letters -long addresses. If he of Accomack can compete in that line with the orator of the Railroad Festival, held some years ago at the fair-grounds, St. Louis, the race will be nip and tuck. The campaign would be closed before the speaking had been concluded.

A Chance for Brown.

Gov. Wisz, no doubt, would be glad to have something to intervene between Ossawatonia and the gallows. How would it do to send him to Brownsville, Texas, to fight Continas? If he is not forwarded with dispatch, however, that other insurgent and fillibuster, Gen. WALKER, will get to Texas first. Brown has the weapons of war ready. Brown against CORTINAS! BROWN against WALKER.

Portentous.

An arrest at Mason and Dixon's line will no doubt be made of the extraordinary colestial phenomenon, reported by telegraph, to have passed New York at ten o'clock yesterday bearing South. Frightened people about Harper's Ferry will conclude that the meteor will whick off Ossawatomie.

Unanimity.

A political committee meeting of the New York "Hards" is spoken of in the telegraph column. Its action was harmoniously unanimous. One Hard man was present, and he adjourned.

Particulars of the Loss of the Royal Charter-Four Hundred and Fifty Persons Drowned.

The melancholy intelligence of the loss of the steamer Royal Charter has already been announced, but by last night's mail we obtain particulars of the terrible catrastrophe by which four hundred and fifty souls perished at

The Royal Charter was well known as one of Messrs. Gibbs, Bright & Co.'s fleet of Australian elippers, and famed for the regularity and speed of her voyages to Australia.

The lamentable event occurred during the gale on the morning of Wednesday the 26th, in Red Wharf Bay, which is situated about three miles to the westward of Puffin Island, Menai Straits, and six or seven to the northwest of Beaumaris, on the coast of Wales, some four heur's sail from Liverpool.

From our foreign files we obtain a detailed

From our foreign files we obtain a detailed report of the wreck: After a splendid passage from Melbourne, accomplished in about fifty-six days, and having landed seventeen passengers at Queenstown, and telegraphed her safe arrival to the owners, she made for Liverpool on Tuesday last. At half-past four P. M. she passed Holyhead, when a strong breeze from the E. N. E. sprang up. At forty-five minutes past seven she passed the At lorty-five minutes past seven she passed the Skerries, and the wind began to veer more to the north, and to increase in strength. At 10 o'clock, being near high water, and the atmosphere thick, with rain, the wind blew a hurricane from N. E., and the vessel was put under all steam and left with bare poles, steering S. E. by E. a quarter E. Finding that the ship had got near the shore, an effort was made to out her about, but the gale was so furious that out her about, but the gale was so furious that the small strength at the screw, compared with the size of the ship and the hight of her masts and upper gear, was of little avail, and they could not get her round. Capt. Taylor came on deck about 9 o'clock, and a lead was kept on deck about 9 o'clock, and a lead was kept constantly going; finding that they were nearing and nearing the shore, the port anchor was let go, in 16 fathoms, with about 75 fathoms of chain paid out. They next let go the starboard anchor, the wind still blowing a perfect hurricane and the weather so thick and dark that nothing could be seen. Before this rockets, and gun-firing, and blue lights had been sent up in the hope of attracting a pilot, but all in vain, not a living thing was to be seen. At 2 o'clock on Wednesday morning she parted her anchor chain, and the stream anchor was got over the bow. got over the bow.

The ship having now got entangled with the land, and struck stern on, the mainmast was out away at half past two o'clock, and in going over the side it carried away the misen top along with it, with a fearful crash. It is said that the ax for the purpose was not readily found in the excitement, but that one was not found in the excitement, but that one was not necessary, for on cutting the stays, so strong was the gale, that it toppled over at once. At 3:45 A. M., they cut away the foremast, but the remedy was too late. Still she kept beating on the rocks, and, heeling at the stern, she swung with her broadside to the land. About dsylight, six o'clock, a Portuguese seaman, named Joseph Rodgerson, tied a cord round his waist and jumped overboard. The land was not more than ten yards away; but the sea was so tremendously high that every wave beat over the ship like a cataract, and rendered every attempt at safety dangerous. rendered every attempt at safety dangerous.

The seaman, however, got a firm footing, and by means of the cord a hawser was got ashore and fastened to the rocks. On this a boatswain's chair was fixed, which could be nauled to and from the ship by men at each end. A few of the islanders came promptly to render assistance, and in the chair about a ozen seamen were hauled ashore. When daylight was dawning, this process, it was sup-posed, would be sufficient to laud all the pas-sengers—or at least to land them until daysengers—or at reast to tand them until day-light revealed some better opportunity. About seven o'clock, the waves beating against her broadside with continued violence, she sud-denly snapped asunder amidships, and tumbled in pieces like a house of cards. All the passengers had kept below, chiefly in the saloons, as they had been repeatedly assured by some of the more active parties, and by Capt. Taylor and his officers, that there was no immediate danger. The falling machinery and lumber seemed to bury 400 of the wretched people.

It is believed that large numbers were ac-tually killed by the crashing debris, but soon afterward the whole ship was broken up like a shattered bottle. The scenes on board meeting illegal? President Econsoror decided that it did; the City Solicitor gave his legal parents, lovers and husbands, children and parents, lovers and friends, were embracing parents, lovers and friends, were emoracing such other with the consciousness that they were about to meet inevitable death. The Rev. Mr. Hodge, a clergyman from New Zealand, before this had commenced a prayer meeting in the saloon, which was earnestly meeting in the saloon, which was carnestly participated in by all until the crash and ruin and the flooding of water rendered a panic universal. About twenty-six persons managed to get ashore, but it was more through Providence than design or ability, for they were all washed on the shelving rocks, and as narrowly escaped being washed backs.

Indeed, many were washed on and off several times, and many who thought they had secured land, or hold fast by a jutting rock, were hurled back again to a watery grave. On the vessel breaking open, numbers of people were to be seen floating about for a few minutes, but what with the strength of the waves, the masses of debris which thickly waves, the masses of debris which thickly covered the sea, and struck many a brave and struggling man's brains out, few were able to gain a firm hold of land. At eight o'clock in the morning nothing but the wreck scattered about, and corpses left on the strand revealed the terrible catastrophe that had befallen nearly five hundred human beings, a few hours before glowing with joy at once a few hours before glowing with joy at once again sighting the shores of Old England, for which they had toiled and saved, and satisfied that now the voyage in which they had almost circumnavigated the globe was safely ended, for they were in the bosom of their country.

ended, for they were in the bosem of their country.

The Royal Charter was an auxiliary screw clipper, built of iron, in 1855, and of 2,749 tuns register. Her engines were made by Mesars. Penn, of Greenwich, and were about 300 horse-power. She was originally built as a sailing vessel, by Mr. Henry Cram of Queensferry, Cheshire, under specifications, for Mr. Jonathan Grindrod of Liverpool.

Before her completion, however, she was pur-Before her completion, however, she was pur-chased by Messrs. Gibbs, Bright & Co., and, under the inspection of Mr. Patterson, of Bris-tol, transformed into a steam-vessel. Her length was three hundred and twenty feet, length was three hundred and twenty feet, and breadth of beam forty-one feet six inches. The first attempt to lanch her was made on the 31st of July, 1855, which proving unsuccessful, she was not actually lanched until the 30th of August following.

With regard to her strength there existed considerable difference of opinion among nautical men; and on her last homeward voyage she is believed to have been considerably strained. The Royal Charter was valued at £120,000, and was insured at Lloyd's, Livarpool and Glasgow. The London Underwriters are said to have accepted about £70,000 insurances to have accepted about £70,000 insurances upon the vessel. She had on board 79,000 ounces of gold, which it is thought may be recovered by divers, and under this impression insurances have been effected in a few cases at 1837 per cent. on salvage. The event has created the despest sensation even in London.

As to the amount of gold on board it was impossible to ascertain. The estimates vary from £500,000 to £800,000. It is said that one of the salcon passengers, who is lost, had himself £10,000 on board.

A GARCONADING STATEMENT PROVED TO BE Untrue.—The statement of the St. Louis Re-publican, that two thousand four hundred and publican, that two thousand four hundred and afty buildings have been erected during the present year, and that the money expended on their construction amounts to the sum of $7,-173,155, is shown by the Missouri Democrat to be entirely untrue, the figures named being grossly exaggerated both as to number and value.
